

Finally the prototype cannon pinion is finished and ready to be tried in the movement where it engaged well with the minute wheel.

When I will have some more time off from the school program I will make the real one in steel.

